Safety From Terror Is Goal Of Meetings

he D.C. Emergency Management Agency will hold a training session at 441 4th St. N.W. Sat. Sep. 21 at 1:30 p.m. Any interested resident of Ward 6 is welcome to attend. The Judiciary Metro stop 4th St. exit on the red line is at that building. Advance registration was allowed on the web.

The purpose of the training session is to "help prepare community leaders to be

On the agency's web site is a pdf for a "Family Emergency Preparedness Guide." The web site is www.dcresponds.com.

SWNA Board To Create Three Part Survey

A "think tank" meeting of the SWNA Board of Directors will be held at the SWNA office in Waterside Mall at 7 pm Mon. Sep. 16 to create a survey document to distribute to the S.W. Community at large. Three topics will be included: The Southwest Waterfront Plan; the nature of the Fourth St. Extension and the 20 year development plan for Waterside Mall proposed by Kaempfer Co., Forest City Enterprises and Bresler & Reiner.

Corcoran Art Museum Coming To Southwest

he Millennium Art Center is in discussion with Corcoran Gallery of Art on use of the center's building at 65 I (Eye) St. S.W. Corcoran needs to find new space for three years while extensive new construction is taking place at the museum on 17th St. N.W.

M.A.C.'s owner Bill Wooby appeared at the SWNA Board meeting Sep. 9 and reported: "I might leave. The Corcoran will do a good job, but I would have liked to see my concept come through...I think it would be good for Southwest. They have all the money in the world. It will be good for you. It won't be a community center. It will be a Corcoran School of Art... By the end of the year we might be out."

Also appearing at the board meeting was Pastor James Butts of 2nd Union Baptist Church on Delaware Ave. S.W. He reported on their efforts for youth and against drug dealing in the neighborhood. Peggy Seates reported on the progress for the Benjamin Banneker memorial on the promenade at L'Enfant Plaza in Southwest.

A New Hotel At 4th & E St. S.W.

By Carole Early

A ccording to the Washington Post Business Section, four Native American tribes will build the only tribally owned enterprise in the District of Columbia here in Southwest. It is being built largely by proceeds from gambling businesses on their reservations.

Besides these investments, some money will come from the owners of the property, Donohoe, the Phillips Development Corp. and through a loan.

It will be run by Hospitality Partners, a Bethesda-based hotel-management company. The hotel will have 233 suites, about 12 stories, a Native American décor and artifacts focusing on Indian history after gambling came to reservations (14 years ago).

The hotel will open in the spring of 2004, a few months prior to the opening of the Smithsonian's new Indian museum, near Independence Ave. S.W. on 4th St.

coming to the Southwest Waterfront near the location of the former Gangplank Restaurant. The restaurant, in the tower and spreading to the pavilion area, will open in two phases—the first slated about Mid-October.

On the menu will be such items as ceviche, broiled or baked fish, burgers, and other blackboard specials. Weekend brunches will be available. Beers and tropical drinks will accompany the food. Catering and party service will be available at some point. Décor will be tropical. Think Mexican resorts.

STATUS OF LIVE-ABOARDS AT THE GANGPLANK MARINA

For decades, the Gangplank Marina has been home to a unique and diverse community of live-aboard and weekend boaters. When the National Capital Revitalization Corporation assumed ownership of the Gangplank a year ago, it was home to about 130 live-aboard boats. Today, due to a moratorium, fewer than 100 are left.

NCRC's moratorium signals losses to the city of shared revenue, citizens, homeowners, taxpayers and voters as they depart the only live-aboard marina in the District. Empty slips can be seen on almost every dock.

Though the NCRC has stated they plan no changes at the marina, new rules and policies are having a turbulent effect. The GPSA is seeking landlord-tenant rights for the live-aboards.

My Years In

Southwest

remember Southwest during the 1950s. At that time my parents and I moved into Southwest. We lived on N St. S.W. between 54 and 74 N St.

Across the street was Howison Place. I attended Syphax during the last part of my elementary school years.

We lived in two brick homes and the walls were so thin you could have long converstaitons with your neighbors and did not ha e to use a telephone.

Around the corner, that is on O St., was Gold Star store. We all called it Goldsteins DGS, and many kids used to go there and buy penny candy, some sodas, what not. Sonny Goldstein was the man's name.

Also, many of us kids loved to play in the alley in the back of N Street, though down the street was Hoover's playground.

I attended church, Rehoboth Baptist Church on First St. I knew Reverend A.H.S. Johnson before he died, and Reverend Lewis cam later.

Many of my friends came out of Southwest.We attended Randall Junior High. Many of us separated by the time of High School. I ended up in Cardozo High.

Ralph "Petey" Green, now deceased. Often spoke of his times growing up in Southwest as well. Names: Old families scuh as Hughes, Weems, Battles. Theu were a big part of Southwest then.

Culture Clash At Arena Stage

By Renee M. Littleton

rena Stage welcomes back artists Culture Clash and director Charles Randolph-Wright (Guys and Dolls) for the commissioned world premiere of Anthems: Culture Clash in the District. Taken right from the communities of Washington, DC, and based upon hundreds of interviews with residents of the District, Anthems delves into the lives of the District's residents after September 11. Shown through a series of moving scenes and vignettes, weaving elements of the past and present, the performance piece draws attention to the cultural, social and political aspects of the District.

Bringing this powerful piece to the stage is Culture Clash, which consists of head writer Richard Montoya, Ric Salinas and Herbert Siguenza. Using their gift as storytellers and with a talented cast of nine actors, assembled onstage is a poignant story based upon interviews with individuals, including Muslim taxicab drivers, clergy, university students, philanthropists, cheerleaders and grief counselors.

"I've long been a fan of the work of the artists, playwrights, forensic poets that are Culture Clash, one of the most refreshing and outrageous groups on the American scene today," said Artistic Director Molly

Smith. "I'm particularly thrilled to place this new work in the capable hands of Charles Randolph-Wright, a brilliant director of theater, film and television. The synergy of these artists will produce an irreverent valentine—hilarious, provocative, poignant—to our city."

Anthems: Culture Clash in the District runs until October 13 at Arena Stage. For ticket information, call 202-488-3300 or click www.arenastage.org.

Rev. Ruth Hamilton, Of SW

A PROFILE

By Maurice Boyd

he Reverend Ruth Hamilton, and her husband Rev. Brian Hamilton, have been copastors of Westminster Presbyterian Church at 400 I (Eye) St. S.W. since 1996. They live on Carrollburg Pl., S.W., with their four year old son, Roman, and Brian's 17 year old son, Eric, who attends Woodrow Wilson High School.

They came to Southwest, D.C., from Detroit, where each was an associate pastor at separate downtown Presbyterian churches. Here at Westminster they share ministerial duties in a congregation composed of both neighbors and suburban attendees.

Rev. Ruth is a graduate of San Francisco Theological Seminary, where she also taught speech and preaching. She worked as a United Church of Christ co-pastor in Fairfield, CA.

Her undergraduate work included three years at Mt. Holyoke College and a degree from Trinity University in San Antonio, TX.

Her father, Rev. Bill Lytle, taught and supervised mission work at the College (now University) of the Ozarks in Clarksville, Arizona. Rev. Ruth started school in Clarksville and then, when the family was on sabbatical, attended the American School in Mexico City, where she was immersed in Mexican culture. She worked as a student-volunteer when they traveled to Guatemala.

She finished high school in Chautauqua, NY.

Rev. Brian Hamilton has rehabbed the home they live in on Carrollsburg Pl and the one next door and has a stained glass workshop at the church. At Westminster, they have introduced Jazz on Friday Night, a walking labyrinth, (built into the floor of the sanctuary), and have started The Southwest Catering Company, which uses the church kitchen.

While conducting this interview, I learned that the Hamiltons have a very extensive broad-ranging library. Rev. Ruth was kind enough to lend me books on the religions of "people of The Book," and on Jesus. I wish I could say I was making better progress in reading them, but, maybe one of these days?

Sorab Modi Lectures on Art, Opera

By Carole Early

Outhwest resident Sorab Modi is lecturing at the Smithsonian and will be lecturing on the Washington Opera's performance of Aida.

He has lived in River Park for almost 20 year.Recently, when I visited the Smithsonian's Arthur M. Sackler Gallery at 1050 Independence Ave. S.W., I was pleased to discover that Sorab was one of the three story-tellers at the Hamza Exhibit.

This exhibit of Árabic art from the 16th century displays 61 rare works from throughout the world. (Only 200 ancient paintings describing the adventures of the Hamza are known to have survivael)

The story telling is in one of the rooms that is dubbed the "coffee house." (There is no coffee, but there are lots of pillows).It is a wonderful place to relax and hear great stories.

Story telling is at 11:00 am, noon and 1:00 pm every day until Sep. 29, when the exhibit ends.

We Saw You At Family Day

he annual Family Day at Lansburg Park was sponsored by Southwest Neighborhood House and the SW/SE Collaborative.

Here are pictures of just a few of the hundreds of people from Southwest who attended. Several rides for children and the usual supply of good food were highlights.
